COIL // SS15

Corporal restraints are induced by our human stasis. Ever wading in revolving narratives, this premise man set, appears induced by our subhuman fear.

Revolt is upon us, with a new generation swiftly approaching. Post-hominal they shiver in the shades. Controlled by machinery, their enhanced senses adjust calmly to our world. Un-abashedly irreverent they rise. Revolt redux.

For SS15, VIBE JOHANSSON returns to the anatomy of exoskeletons. Incorporating innovative ways to dissect our silhouette. The deconstructed wanderers sport tactile layers, fused with sharply tailored uniforms. Effeminate, yet powerful, the garments embrace geometry and body architecture. Incorporating traditional Japanese techniques, such as Boro and Saki-Ori, each piece is meticulously constructed, boasting intricate utility.

A functional selection of linens, lush silks, sturdy tech fabrics and breezy poplins are arranged lightly for spring. Immersed in the quiet deep, bright whites and deep blacks shape the solemn backdrop to the collection. Noticeable is the textural interplay, with surfaces appearing distressed, even mutated as sartorial shielding. Protective utility is key for SS15, visible in the edited coats, elongated dresses, sharply cut tops and lush pantaloons.

COIL aims to question the essence of our humanity, retrieving moral solitude and post-human reflection.
